

LITERATURE

How do the visual arts & literature influence and reflect our culture?

Join art lecturer Cindy Edelman and writer Stacey Goldring for an enriching conversation that explores the universality of the arts and its positive effects on our country's proud legacy of civil discourse.

Mission

LiterARTure explores how the influences of the arts are deeply woven into our country's rich history, allowing us to nurture the indispensable American tradition of civil discourse, a legacy established by our nation's founders.

LiterARTure Series

Outlaws, Rebels and Troublemakers

Understanding of the terms degenerate and banned, who was it applied to and why. Exploring art and literature that continue to push the envelope

Biblical Expressions

Examining the Hebrew Bible and the New Testament as treasure troves for artists and authors throughout history, and how at different times, artists, poets and authors interpret these sacred texts very differently

Holocaust Remembrance

Exploring art and literature in relation to Holocaust memorialization. Are the arts a bridge to understanding the evils of men? How are resistance and memorialization expressed? Survey in art and literature in relationship to influential European Jewish families of the late 19th and 20th centuries

This Land is Your Land

Revealing the grit and beauty of American values and capturing quintessential American experiences during some of the toughest times in our history through photography, painting and the written word
